

Aunt Pearl's Boarding School of Life...an cooperative living arrangement, an announcement opening July 16, 2021.

Welcome

Would you have an interest in a cooperative housing project with others who are interested in pursuing intellectual quests regarding the human voyage?

- Facilities available are private or shared rooms
- Mutual Sharing of Meals
- Sessions of meditations and round table discussions for optimal understanding of the nature of our habitations and their transitions. Topics welcomed by residents and guests.

Please share your aspirations, and intentions in being a part of a collective housing environment

Together, we serve to help one another in progressions, upholding privacy of space and values, share meals and expenses by participatory budgeting, business ventures, out-reach services, house duties, permaculture, and much more as there is an interest to contribute while honouring special needs.”

You've probably heard these terms floating around—intentional community, ecovillage, commune, housing cooperatives—but what do they mean to you? If you like, please answer a few questions and send your contact information to keep you informed of the progress of Aunt Pearl's.

Opening; July 16, 2021.

“Intentional community” is an umbrella term that includes “ecovillages, cohousing, residential land trusts, income-sharing communes, student co-ops, spiritual communities, boarding schools and other projects where people live together on the basis of explicit common values.” The community's binding purpose is responsibility to all peoples, the planet and progressions in a journey. A good neighbor commits to varying degrees of shared, sustainable, progressive and intuitive lifestyles.
